It knew, in fact, a period of shine between X and XI century, when it was Italian Maritime Republic together with Pisa, Genoa and Venice.
Amalfi entertained commercial relationships with the east importing products of notable merit such as coffee, spice, paper and carpets.
Today the tourist can retrace these golden centuries thanks to the "historical boat Race of the Maritime Republics ", it is an event thath develops every four years in the month of June.
Unfortunately Amalfi lost its economic and commercial independence with the advent of the Norman before, and with the Angioinis and the Aragonese subsequently.
The City knew a renewal time thanks to the practice of the "Grand Tour" started in the XVII century that has brought to the exploitation of its specificities as landscape, architecture, beaches, wine and food: such as the famous " sfusato amalfitano" from whose peel is drawn the famous liquora "limoncello" that you can taste, together with the other dishes of the Amalfi kitchen near our Locanda Tavernola.
